Anne manages Bay Area Older Adults' daily operations, long term strategy, fundraising, programs and volunteers. In order to further advocate for Bay Area seniors, Anne was appointed as a Santa Clara County Commissioner. In this role, she collaborates with the Department of Aging and Adult Services and the Board of Supervisors to develop strategy and plans for addressing the unmet needs of Santa Clara County seniors including transportation and comprehensive information services. Additionally, Anne is a member of the Silicon Valley Healthy Aging Partnership Leadership Team whose role is to advise on overall direction, and assist with funding, education and outreach for the delivery of evidence-based health promotion programs to older adults in Santa Clara County.

In the first part of her career, Anne was awarded two pre-doctoral and two post-doctoral fellowship grants for cancer research and published 15 peer-reviewed scientific articles within five years. She transitioned into the commercial sector where she has over ten years of strategic marketing and business development experience within global biotechnology and pharmaceutical companies such as Molecular Devices, MDS Sciex, Thermo Fisher Scientific, Affymetrix and XOMA. At these companies, she was responsible for closing multi-million dollar alliances and deals with commercial and non-profit entities, management of multi-disciplinary project teams and leading development and execution of business strategy and project plans.

Anne received her Ph.D. from UC San Diego, pursued her American Cancer Society postdoctoral fellowship to identify new breast tumor markers at The Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, and completed her M.B.A. at San Jose State University.
